 Bedtime Math®

This site has a charitable mission to help kids love numbers so they can handle the math in real life. How? By making math part of your family routine at home. From the site: "Parents can sign up to get a fun, new math problem every day by email, on our website, and on our free app with Bedtime Math."

"Targeted for kids ages 3-9, it begins with a quick, fun set-up story, followed by three math problems at three levels of challenge." Findings from a University of Chicago study shows that Bedtime Math, already proven to boost kids' math performance, has effects that last for years. These daily math problems are really fun, and bring math to life. Check it out here: www.BedtimeMath.org

Be a Good Egg

by Julianne Allen,
Family Engagement & Communication Specialist
LINK Program Coordinator

Usually I am excited to fill this space with something lighthearted and fun to help you make sense of parenting and raising kids in this crazy world. But this month I am really struggling to come up with something to say that doesn't feel completely pointless. I like to use humor to relate to my fellow Bulldog parents. And usually, that comes very easily for me. But this month, I found myself, well, STUCK. I couldn't seem to come up with even one humorous anecdote or story to share with you.

I thought about discussing the cruel joke of Daylight Saving Time beginning soon, and how none of us deserve to lose an hour of sleep that we never had in the first place. I'm a huge fan of St. Patrick's Day, and other than leprechauns, which are horrible and terrifying, it's fun to talk about rainbows and jigs and pots of gold and how raising two Irish lassies here full of sass has also at times been horrible and terrifying. Spring Break is coming up, and there are many funny stories to tell about breaks gone bad, with snow or COVID or worse dampening our hopes for relaxation and renewal. I thought about ALL of those things. Yet, I couldn't write about them.

I couldn't write about them because I can't stop thinking about the families who are fighting for their lives on the other side of the world. I thought about the children who have been harmed or killed, the young men and women who are fighting to save their country, the moms and dads and grandparents who are desperate to protect their families from harm. I don't know anyone in Ukraine, but looking at the images of the destruction and terror, I feel like I know them all. I'm a mom who would walk through fire and stand in front of tank to protect my kids. I bet you would too. My husband talks about wanting to go to Ukraine to fight. I've never heard him talk this way before. But he loves his family, and he sees the dads in Ukraine who love their families. We can't look away.

Most of us will not have a direct impact on what happens "over there". But we can make a difference "over here", in our small school community. We can treat one another with kindness. We can have empathy for others. We can view those who are different from us as people we can learn from rather than hate or fear. We can respect one another. We can co-exist. The Bulldog Way- what we teach our students- is to Be Safe, Be Respectful, Be Responsible, and Be Kind. When you put it that way, it seems pretty easy. We don't have to be best friends with those we really don't like or agree with. But we can change the way we interact with them. We can "Be a Good Egg".

Dictionary.com says that "a good egg" is someone who is good, kind-hearted, pleasant, agreeable, and trustworthy. At this time of year, when we talk a lot about eggs- decorating them, hiding them, and eating them (I prefer the chocolate peanut-butter kind)- it should be easy to remember to be a good egg.

One of the few things that I knew about the Ukrainian people before now was that they have an incredible tradition of decorating Easter eggs. Known as pysanky, this is an important art form that dates back centuries. Ukrainian Easter eggs are decorated using the wax-resist (batik) method. They are works of art that are given as gifts to family and important community members. Their importance to the culture of Ukraine is evidenced by the PREHISTORIC decorated ceramic eggs discovered by archaeologists! (I do not recommend eating those, friends.)

According to folklore, pysanky can help ward off evil from overtaking the world. Really. That's what I found in my research which you can read more about HERE. I don't know if there are enough pysanky in the world to ward off the evil trying to overtake it. But talk about "a good egg". I can't think of anything I'd rather be.

SnackScience!

When you need an excuse to snack, turn it into a learning opportunity and congratulate yourself for being so smart!

PEEPS PLAYDOUGH!

YOU WILL NEED

6 Bunny Peeps (plus extra peeps for stuffing in your cheeks while you make the dough)

6-8 Tablespoons of Flour

1 Tablespoon Crisco

STEP 1. In a microwave-safe bowl, add 6 peeps, 6 tablespoons flour, and 1 tablespoon of Crisco.

STEP 2. Place in microwave for 30 seconds. Remove and stir together.

STEP 3. Once you cannot stir anymore, take out and start to knead in your hands. If it's too sticky, then add more flour and keep kneading until it's no longer sticky. Don't add too much.

That's it! Please note- don't eat the dough. Just don't. Eat the extra Peeps instead. Make sure it has cooled completely before you and the kids try it out. Ask the kids: How does heating the Peeps change their properties? What happens if you cook them too long or too little?
